Child's Health Comes First

Supreme Court Revises Parental Visitation Terms

Sheikh Rayees • December 30, 2024

PUBLISHED REPORT

The Supreme Court recently reinforced the principle that a child's well-being must take precedence in parental disputes, modifying interim visitation rights granted to a father. The decision shifts the location of visits to prioritize the health and safety of a two-year-old child.

Core of the Dispute The case involved a couple who married in 2021 and had a daughter in June 2022. Living separately since August 2022, the mother filed...
