Flawed Probe, Solid Proof

Supreme Court Says Conviction Can Stand Despite Investigative Lapses

Sheikh Rayees • April 22, 2025

PUBLISHED REPORT

In a ruling that cuts through the fog of flawed police work, the Supreme Court has made it clear: a botched investigation doesn't automatically sink a prosecution—so long as there's solid evidence to keep the case afloat. This came as the Court upheld the conviction of a man convicted alongside others in a violent conspiracy-turned-murder case. His bid for acquittal? A claim that the investigation was so riddled with errors...
