Madras High Court Draws a Hard Line

Arbitrators Can't Peek Behind a Company's Mask

Sheikh Rayees • November 27, 2025

PUBLISHED REPORT

In a ruling that snaps like a cold steel shutter, the Madras High Court has declared that arbitral tribunals must stay firmly in their lane—they cannot pry open a company's identity to decide who truly pulls the strings inside. In other words, the corporate veil stays shut unless the Court itself decides otherwise.
