Midnight Petitions Draw Supreme Court's Ire; Four PILs Tossed Out in One Stroke

Sheikh Rayees • March 11, 2026

PUBLISHED REPORT

The Supreme Court on Monday sharply rebuked a lawyer for filing a cluster of public interest petitions the Bench described as poorly drafted, vague and entirely unnecessary. In a brief but pointed hearing, the Court dismissed four separate PILs that touched on issues ranging from alcohol regulation and land registration to the supposed “tamasic” nature of onions and garlic.
