SUPREME COURT

No Sentence for POCSO Convict

Supreme Court Acknowledges Complex Realities of Love, Law, and a Broken System

Sheikh Rayees • May 24, 2025

PUBLISHED REPORT

In a rare and unsettling turn, the Supreme Court has opted not to impose a sentence on a man convicted under the Protection of Children from Sexual Offences (POCSO) Act, citing the victim's lived reality—one that legal definitions alone failed to capture. The decision, handed down by a bench comprising Justices Abhay Oka and Ujjal Bhuyan, leans on Article 142 of the Constitution, allowing the Court to do “complete justice.”...
