Supreme Court Affirms Executive's Authority on Mineral Royalties, Limits Judicial Review

Sheikh Rayees • November 11, 2024

PUBLISHED REPORT

In a landmark ruling, the Supreme Court upheld the executive's authority over the computation of mineral royalties, asserting that such policy decisions fall squarely within the government's domain and lie outside the judiciary's purview—unless the decision-making process itself is illegal. This judgment dismissed a challenge to the government's recalculated royalty method on minerals, maintaining that courts lack the specialized expertise to evaluate such...
