SUPREME COURT

Supreme Court Affirms Limits on Compassionate Appointments, Dismisses “Vested Right” Claim

Sheikh Rayees • November 15, 2024

PUBLISHED REPORT

The Supreme Court has clarified that compassionate appointments, provided to support families facing financial crises after the death of a public servant, are not an automatic or vested right. Instead, the Court emphasized that these appointments must undergo careful scrutiny to ensure they meet stringent requirements. In a case brought forward by a man seeking a compassionate appointment following the death of his father, a police constable, the Court, led...
