SUPREME COURT

Supreme Court Overturns Death Sentence, Cites Youth and Socio-Economic Struggles

Sheikh Rayees • September 24, 2024

PUBLISHED REPORT

In a significant ruling, the Supreme Court recently commuted the death sentence of a man convicted of rape and murder, citing his age at the time of the crime and his socio-economic background as key mitigating factors. The man, aged 22 at the time, hailed from a disadvantaged community with no criminal history in his family. The case involved the brutal assault and killing of a minor, for which the...
