Supreme Court Slams “Second Bite at the Cherry”

Fresh Complaint Can’t Be Revived by Sneaking In a New Charge

Sheikh Rayees • November 28, 2025

PUBLISHED REPORT

In a firm pushback against procedural backdoors, the Supreme Court has made it clear that a closure report doesn’t give complainants a free pass to resurrect old allegations by tacking on a shiny new offence. If the story is the same and the narrator hasn’t changed, the Court said, the law won’t allow an encore performance.
