SUPREME COURT

Supreme Court Strikes Down Tenant's Ownership Claim, Cites Lack of Registered Document

Sheikh Rayees • September 17, 2024

PUBLISHED REPORT

In a decisive ruling, the Supreme Court dismissed a tenant's claim for ownership of a property, emphasizing that no title transfer can occur without a registered document. The tenant had based their ownership claim on a settlement agreement with the landlord, which, the Court ruled, did not equate to transferring ownership. The dispute began when the landlord filed for eviction, citing the deteriorated state of the property. A settlement was...
