SUPREME COURT

Time's Up Means Case Closed

Even Without a Limitation Issue on Paper, Says Supreme Court

Sheikh Rayees • April 12, 2025

PUBLISHED REPORT

In a ruling that slices through 25 years of legal drift, the Supreme Court declared that a civil suit can be struck down for being time-barred—even if the trial court forgot to raise the issue formally. The apex court made it clear: when a case is dead on arrival because it misses the statutory deadline under the Limitation Act, no technical oversight can breathe life into it. No special issue...
